"Saudi Arabia Plans Expansion of Skill Verification Program to Cover 160 Countries"

The programme has already been introduced to India, Pakistan, Bangladesh and Sri Lanka

Cairo: Saudi Arabia's labor authorities are set to extend a vocational verification initiative to encompass up to 160 countries as part of a comprehensive plan aimed at assessing the skills of workers destined for employment in the kingdom, thereby regulating the labor market.

Initiated earlier this year by the Saudi Ministry of Human Resources in collaboration with the Foreign Ministry, the program has been progressively implemented in 62 countries.

Involving practical and theoretical assessments, the program focuses on 23 categories of vocational skills and conditions the issuance of a worker's visa on successful completion of the tests in their home country.

Nawaf Al Ayadi, the head of the Vocational Accreditation Programme at the Ministry of Human Resources, stated, "The vocational verification program targets professions such as plumbing and electricity. It has been introduced in four key countries, covering 80 percent of expatriate workers heading to the kingdom — India, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and Pakistan," as reported by the Saudi news portal Akhbar24.

This initiative is specifically designed for workers holding degrees, with their certificates undergoing verification. The official mentioned that the program has been launched in 62 countries and aims to expand its coverage to 160 countries.

The scheme is part of the Ministry of Human Resources' broader efforts to enhance the caliber of workers in the kingdom's labor market, elevate professional services, increase productivity, and curtail the influx of unskilled labor into the country.

Saudi Arabia, with a population of 32.2 million, hosts a substantial community of migrant workers. In late 2020, the country introduced significant labor reforms, overhauling the sponsorship system. These reforms, implemented in March 2021, grant job mobility and regulate the issuance of exit and re-entry visas for expatriate workers without requiring the employer's approval, allowing for increased flexibility and mobility among expatriate workers.

"Chinese Companies Advise Employees Against Bringing iPhones to the Workplace"

Numerous Chinese agencies and state-backed enterprises across the nation have reportedly instructed their employees not to bring Apple iPhones and other foreign devices to the workplace, according to sources cited by Bloomberg News on Friday.

This move could mark the initiation of an unprecedented prohibition, potentially hindering Apple Inc. and Samsung Electronics Co. from accessing segments of the world's largest mobile market.

China has been striving to reduce dependence on foreign technologies for over a decade, urging state-affiliated entities, including banks, to transition to domestic software and promoting the manufacturing of domestic semiconductor chips.

In the past month or two, several state-owned enterprises and government departments in at least eight provinces have allegedly issued instructions for employees to use local brands, as reported by Bloomberg News.

Verbal directives were purportedly issued in December by smaller firms and agencies in lower-tier cities in provinces such as Zhejiang, Shandong, Liaoning, and central Hebei, which is home to the world's largest iPhone factory.

While Chinese officials denied reports in September suggesting a blanket ban on iPhones within government agencies, concerns were expressed about security incidents related to Apple's phones. The U.S. government referred to the alleged iPhone ban in China as an "inappropriate retaliation."

Bloomberg notes that the full extent of the iPhone ban in China and the strictness of its enforcement remain unclear. Nevertheless, the ban poses a significant challenge for Apple and other foreign technology companies, including Samsung.

Putin Pledges to Achieve 'Self-Sufficiency' for Russia During Fifth Term in the Kremlin

We will only make decisions ourselves without foreign advice from abroad

MOSCOW: In his inaugural campaign address ahead of the March election to extend his tenure until at least 2030, Russian President Vladimir Putin asserted his commitment to ensuring Russia's "sovereignty and self-sufficiency" in the face of Western challenges. This upcoming election marks Putin's bid for a fifth Kremlin term, occurring just over two years since the initiation of the Ukraine offensive.

At 71 years old, Putin has been in power since 2000, and this election is poised to extend his rule until at least 2030, with the potential to remain in the Kremlin until 2036. Speaking at a congress of the ruling United Russia party, Putin emphasized the importance of Russia being either a "sovereign, self-sufficient state" or not existing at all, and he declared that achieving "sovereignty" would be a key focus of his fifth term.

During his address, Putin expressed his determination to make decisions independently, without foreign influence, stating that Russia cannot compromise its sovereignty for economic gain. The United Russia party unanimously endorsed Putin's candidacy, with party leaders and public figures delivering supportive speeches. The party, led by Dmitry Medvedev, who previously served as president before Putin's return to the Kremlin in 2012, remains a steadfast supporter of Putin.

As the 2024 election approaches, Russia's Ukraine campaign continues into another winter, resulting in a significant loss of life on both sides. Criticism of the military operation is prohibited in Russia, where the government maintains that it is withstanding Western economic pressure.

Putin accused Western countries of attempting to "sow internal troubles" in Russia, asserting that such tactics have been ineffective. Despite challenges, Putin declared that there is still much to be done for the interests of Russia, emphasizing the country's historic tasks.

United Russia leaders and pro-Kremlin figures expressed unwavering support for Putin, with Medvedev labeling Western countries as "dangerous and cynical enemies." A special forces commander from Chechnya, Apti Alaudinov, praised Putin as a leader given by God, asserting that Russians cannot envision themselves without him.

Notably, the election takes place amid a significant crackdown on dissent in Russia, with Putin's main political opponent, Alexei Navalny, serving a 19-year prison sentence. Concerns have been raised about Navalny's well-being, as his allies report no contact with him for ten days, suggesting a potential relocation to another prison coinciding with Putin's election campaign.

Russia's President Vladimir Putin addresses the audience during the United Russia party congress in Moscow, on December 17, 2023.
